

Sink 2.0 by Uttam Grandhi

Context

Though sophisticated kitchen equipment like dishwashers have been invented to reduce human labor, the disembodiment it has with the sink creates a new effort to transfer the utensils (sometimes heavy ones) from the latter to former.

Content

A kitchen sink that doubles as a dish washer eliminates the additional effort required to load the dish washers. The sink has an automatic lid with display and auto-lock, detachable rack, nozzles to spray water and blowers to dry the washed utensils.

Concept

The sink's transparent lid emerges from the slot below the faucet and locks itself once the clean cycle starts. A display shows a huge timer which indicates the status and other useful information. The faucet doesn't dispense water while the cleaning is ON.